THE exact origins of Rum Butter are shrouded in mystery. No-one knows who invented this true Cumbrian delicacy but it first appeared in local larders in the late 18th century. By the time Queen Victoria ascended to the throne in 1837. Rum Butter (also known as hard sauce) was integral to every christening feast when a bowl of Rum Butter was passed around the visitors. The new mother received a portion to hasten her recovery and it was even given to the baby to bestow good characteristics: butter for goodness, rum for spirit, sugar for sweetness and nutmeg for spice! Its head was also washed with rum – hence the saying "wetting the baby's head".
